Miss Mannie Ryman .- This popular singer and dancer who visited Honolulu in 1870-1, returned in the Bark D. C. Murray, and proposes to give a few concerts at the Royal Hawallan Theatre. Since she left here in February 1871, she has made a tour through the Australian Colonies and the Pacific States, and was everywhere greated with delighted audiness. By notice, in another column, it will be soon that she gives ber first cotestal ament on Thursday evening, at the Theater.

FOURTH OF JULY.-Very little preparation has Hotel, from 12% till Tr. M. We hear of comerces pleades and frasts in preparation, but there will be to general celebration as has been the custom in former years. The company of "Antiques and Horribbes" will parade the streets about 7 o'clock, marening up Nunana, thence into School, down Fort, and through Beretania, Emma, Hotel, Richard, and King streets. They promise at least a litthe few for old and young.

Eggo.-The city of Yedo (or Tokio, as the people and papers now wall it,) is the capital as well as the largest city in Japan. The census lately taken gives it a total population of 825,540 persons, of which 423,470 are males and 299,770 are females. Not included in the above were 101,730 persons in the city not residents, but travelers from other parts of the Empire. The houses are generally chesply constructed of wood, grass, ties, and even paper. In the centre of the city the Emperer, or Tenne, has his palace. There are under him a guvernor and two licutement governors. Yokuhams, the port of cutry, where most of the foreigners reside, and the principal trading is done, is connected by a railroad with the capital, distant filters miles. Although the fore is low, about a quarter of a dollar, the reexipts from the railroad promise to put its entire cost lu five or six years. The success of this road will lead to the construction of new roads in other parts of the Empire.

Marshal McMahon,

Who was elected President of France by the Assembly, on the 24th of May, in place of President Thiers, was born in 1808 of Irish parentage. He entered the army in 1825, and has been prominent in every French war since that time. He was taken captive by the Germans at Sedan, at the surrender of Napoleon. He is unquestionrecord is a brilliant one. Yet with all this, his sympathies are with the Imperial party in France. as it is natural they should be. As in former revolutionary changes in France, nearly everything if need be. Yours, &c. now depends on the army. McMahon is at the head of the government beside being Commander-in-Chief of the forces. He has served under Esmakan died at his residence in this city on the Bourbons, the Orleanists, the Empire and the Republic, and been in turn loyal to such form of government; but his greatest triumphs have been Grand Cross and the title of the Duke of Magenta were both conferred by Napoleon. He is perhaps the most popular man with the soldiery when there were fears that the troops might join in the reign of terror. He did not attend the be construed as a declaration against the Republie. Judged by his past acts, it is impossible to tell what form of government he would prefer. But as be is master of the situation, and has been brought into power by the aid of enemies of the Republic, that circumstance is most discouraging to the friends of government by the people. His replies and addresses indicate that he relies on

The National Assembly has two great tasks—liberation of territory and restorated of order. The first was conducted ably by my predecessor, with heroic pateneses, and the country and I rely on you to accomplish it. I shall follow the foreign potery of my predecessor. I have a wish for peace and a reorganization of the army, desiring only to restore our strength and regain for France her rank among nations. The home policy will be resolutely conservative. The administration must be unbined with a conservative spirit, and appoint to office respectors. conservative spirit, and appoint to office respectors of the law to defend society against faction, and stand as the scattered to see that your severeign will be obeyed in its integrity."

Nothing can be gathered from these utterances, which can be in any way constraind as presaging a change of government, nor would it have been the antiversity of the Queen's birthday May 14th, was kept in London as a half-ballday and was usher-

The Right of Territorial Cession.

Ms. Korros :- Remarks made occasionally by parties, as reported to me, seem to carry with them the idea that for this Government to onle any portion of its territory as a part of the equivaleat for a reciprocity treaty would be derogatory to it. I cannot take this view of the case. For a nation to part with a portion or the whole of its beritage for an equivalent which it values quite as much, or more, than that which it surrenders to obtain it, cannot be any more derogatory to a nation than an individual. Nations, if they so choose, can unite their interests with as little dishonor as can individuals. It is a mere question of mutual interest, and there is nothing more derogatory to the parties in the transaction, than there is in two or more individuals becoming common and joint partners in any mercantile or other enterprise. Great Britain is the greatest colonizing power of modern times, having about sixty colonies gradually accumulated through a period of three bundred and fifty years. Of these ten or more were coded to her by her lormer proprietors, and no doubt for a consideration, which the former owners, or sovereigns valued more than the price which they paid for them. These cessions are not noted as captures, or settlements, in my aqthority, but cessions, and hence are supposed to be the result of burgain by the parties to the transactions.

The theory of government is, that it exists for all forms, whether of monarchy or republic, and the claim itself, by diverse forms, goes far to establish the correctness and justice of the theory. however much governments may depart from it in practice. If then the theory be correct, that government exists for the good of the people or nation, surely every principle of right demands that those to whom the nation's welfare is delegated, should be diligent in the use of all right means to promote that welfare. If this demands the cession of political or personal rights, then so far from its being derogatory to exercise this power the administrator refasing to do so from any selfish consideration betrays his solemn trust and becomes the oppressor instead of the benefactor of the people,- for he fails to do what their best interest demands.

If then the welfare of the people will be promoted by the cession of any part of these islands to Great Britain or the United States, for a con-Encors having declined to serve, Mr. J. O. Carter to Great Britain or the United States, for a consideration of more value to them, then they are not true to themselves if they do not make the cassion. It so happens that our geographical position, makes our commercial relation and pros perity to depend more upon the United States. thus any other country, and free and unrestricted commerce with that country is essential to the continued prosperity of this, and the cession of a bay and adjoining lands necessary for a naval station for the United States, is of itself not worthy of a thought when compared with the advantages which an unrestricted commerce would be to the country. The commerce between the two countries is nearly equal in its amount, but not so the duties levied by the respective governments—the isilands paying to the United States upon their products exported there, about three dollars for one levied upon goods imported from there, into these islands. Reciprocity would greatly stimuturning broke up without acting on the resolution. Inte and increase the commerce between the two countries, and measurably promote the prosperity of both; though in that country of vast extent, population and wealth, it would be but little felt compared with what it would in this country of small territory, population and wealth. It seems to me that every true lover of the Hawaiian people must tavor and labor for such a treaty, as honorable and advantageous to us. whilst it offers what is right and we hope will ably one of the best soldiers of France, and his prove acceptable to them, and I am surprised to bear that any intelligent man residing here is opposed to a reciprocity treaty with the United States, even with the cession of a naval station.
